Acknowledgement

I am very grateful to Unified Mentor for giving me the opportunity to complete my 3-month Digital Marketing Internship. This internship gave me practical experience in social media marketing and helped me understand how digital marketing works in a professional environment.

I would also like to sincerely thank my mentor for guiding me throughout this project. Whenever I had doubts, especially about the project requirements and report format, the doubt-clearing sessions helped me understand everything better and complete my work with more confidence.

This was my first internship project, so I learned many new things during this journey. From creating a brand to designing advertisements and preparing this report, every step helped me improve my knowledge and skills.

Finally, I would like to thank everyone who supported and encouraged me during this internship. Their guidance and motivation helped me complete this project successfully.

Executive Summary

I completed a three-month internship at Unified Mentor in the Digital Marketing domain, with Social Media Marketing as my subdomain. As part of my internship, I worked on a project called Facebook Practice Campaign Ad.

For this project, I created an imaginary skincare brand called Auravé. I designed the brand identity, created product mockups, and developed five products: Green Gram Cleanser, Rice Water Toner, Aloe Vera Gel, Rice Flour Face Pack, and Multani Mitti Face Pack.

While working on this project, I learned how to create an imaginary brand from the beginning and understand how branding actually works. I also learned how to think from a customer's point of view while planning a product. One of the things I enjoyed the most was choosing the right colour combination and designing the brand in a way that looked attractive and caught people's attention.

Although this was a practice campaign and I did not run any live advertisements, the project helped me understand how Facebook marketing works in a practical way. Overall, this project improved my creativity, branding knowledge, and confidence in social media marketing.

Introduction

Digital marketing is one of the most in-demand skills in today's generation because almost every business uses online platforms to promote its products and services. Nowadays, people use social media platforms like Facebook, Instagram and WhatsApp to connect with customers and grow their businesses. Running advertisements on these platforms helps businesses reach people from different places more easily.

Social media marketing has become very important because it allows businesses to reach their target audience quickly. In the past, businesses mainly depended on traditional marketing methods like visiting shops, distributing pamphlets, or advertising through newspapers. These methods took more time and effort to reach customers. Today, with social media marketing, businesses can promote their products from anywhere using just a mobile phone or a computer.

Among all the social media platforms, Facebook is still one of the most useful platforms for businesses because people from different age groups actively use it. Whether the target audience is young adults, middle-aged people, or older adults, Facebook provides a good opportunity to reach them through different types of advertisements.

As part of this internship project, I created a Facebook Practice Campaign for my fictional skincare brand, Auravé. This was not a live advertising campaign. Instead, the purpose of this project was to understand how a Facebook campaign is planned, how advertisements are created, and how businesses use Facebook to promote their products before running a real campaign.

Company Overview

Unified Mentor is a software training institution that provides internship programs and skill development opportunities for students and fresh graduates. The company offers practical learning in different technical and non-technical domains, helping learners gain industry-related knowledge through real-world projects and assignments.

During my internship, I was enrolled in the Digital Marketing domain with a specialisation in Social Media Marketing. The internship focused on improving practical skills by allowing interns to work on project-based tasks rather than focusing only on theoretical concepts. Throughout the internship, mentors conducted regular sessions to explain project requirements, clear doubts, and guide us whenever we faced difficulties.

This internship gave me the opportunity to understand how digital marketing projects are planned and completed in a professional environment. It also helped me improve my creativity, problem-solving skills, and confidence while working on practical assignments.

Internship Overview

I completed a three-month internship at Unified Mentor in the Digital Marketing domain, with Social Media Marketing as my subdomain. During this internship, I learned the fundamentals of digital marketing through practical assignments and project-based learning.

The internship was divided into different stages. In the beginning, I completed the learning modules provided by the company to understand the basics of digital marketing. After completing the learning phase, I was assigned practical projects to apply what I had learned.

For the Social Media Marketing subdomain, there were different project options available. Since this was my first internship project, I wanted to choose a project that would help me understand the basics without making it too complicated. So, I selected the Facebook Practice Campaign Ad project from the available options.

The main purpose of this project was to understand how a Facebook advertising campaign is planned and created. It was a practice campaign, so I did not run any live advertisements. Instead, I learned the complete process, including creating a brand, planning the campaign, designing advertisements, writing captions, publishing posts on a Facebook Business Page, and documenting the entire project in a professional report.

Working on this project gave me practical experience and helped me understand the workflow of a Facebook marketing campaign. It also improved my confidence in handling social media marketing projects and prepared me for future digital marketing tasks.

Project Overview

The Facebook Practice Campaign Ad was my first project during the Social Media Marketing internship at Unified Mentor. The purpose of this project was to understand how a Facebook advertising campaign is planned and created for a business. Since this was a practice project, I was not required to run a live advertisement. Instead, I focused on learning the complete campaign process from planning to execution.

For this project, I created an imaginary skincare brand called Auravé and built its complete brand identity. I designed the brand logo, created product mockups, and developed five skincare products: Green Gram Cleanser, Rice Water Toner, Aloe Vera Gel, Rice Flour Face Pack, and Multani Mitti Face Pack. After creating the brand, I planned a Facebook campaign and designed different advertisement formats to promote the products.

As part of the project, I created a Single Image Ad, a Carousel Ad, and a Video Ad (Reel). I also created a Facebook Business Page and published all the advertisements with suitable captions and hashtags. Although the campaign was not run as a paid advertisement, it helped me understand how Facebook marketing works and how businesses present their products professionally on social media.

By completing this project, I gained practical experience in campaign planning, branding, content creation, advertisement design, and Facebook Business Page management. It also helped me understand the workflow of a Facebook advertising campaign and improved my confidence in social media marketing.

Brand Overview

For this project, I created an imaginary skincare brand called Auravé. I chose a skincare brand because it is something I can relate to as a woman, and I already have some knowledge about skincare products and their benefits. I felt that choosing a category I was familiar with would help me think more creatively and build a better brand.

The name Auravé was inspired by the idea of "Aura", which represents natural beauty and confidence, combined with a simple and elegant brand style

. I wanted a name that would sound unique, be easy to pronounce, and stay in people's minds. Since this was a fictional brand, I had the freedom to build its identity from the beginning, including the logo, product packaging, and overall brand theme.

Auravé focuses on natural skincare and offers products made with traditionally known ingredients. For this project, I created five products: Green Gram Cleanser, Rice Water Toner, Aloe Vera Gel, Rice Flour Face Pack, and Multani Mitti Face Pack. Each product was designed with its own colour theme based on its main ingredient, while still maintaining the overall brand identity.

The target audience for Auravé is women aged 18 to 50 who are interested in natural skincare. The brand is mainly designed for students, working professionals, and skincare enthusiasts who are looking for simple, affordable, and trustworthy skincare products for their daily routine.

While creating the brand, I also designed two versions of the logo: a primary logo for branding purposes and a secondary logo for product labels and packaging. I also created product mockups to give the brand a more realistic and professional appearance.

Overall, creating Auravé helped me understand how a brand can be developed from an idea into a complete identity. It also improved my creativity and gave me practical experience in branding and product presentation.

Brand Vision, Mission & Values

Brand Vision

The vision behind Auravé is to encourage women to choose natural skincare with confidence. Nowadays, many people buy skincare products after watching advertisements or influencers without knowing whether the products are actually suitable for their skin. Sometimes, these products contain ingredients that may not suit sensitive skin and can cause irritation or other skin concerns.

Through Auravé, I wanted to create a brand that focuses on simple, natural skincare made with traditionally trusted ingredients. My vision is not to promise instant results or claim that all skin problems will disappear. Instead, I want people to follow a gentle and consistent skincare routine using products that are easy to understand and comfortable to use.

I believe that healthy skin comes from regular care rather than quick solutions. My goal is to create a brand that people can trust and use with confidence, without making unrealistic promises about the products.

Brand Mission

The mission of Auravé is to provide affordable, natural-inspired skincare products for women aged 18 to 50. The brand is designed for people who want a simple skincare routine using ingredients that have been traditionally known for their skincare benefits.

Through this project, I wanted to build a brand that focuses on quality, simplicity, and trust. Every product was planned with the idea of helping people take better care of their skin through a gentle and practical skincare routine.

Brand Values

The values of Auravé are based on the principles that I wanted my brand to represent.

Natural Care – Using naturally inspired ingredients that are traditionally known for skincare.

Trust – Never making unrealistic promises or misleading claims about the products.

Affordability – Creating products that are accessible to more people.

Simplicity – Encouraging an easy and practical skincare routine without making it complicated.

Customer First – Designing products by thinking about the needs and comfort of people with different skin types, especially those with sensitive skin.

Market Analysis & Target Audience

Before creating my brand, I spent some time thinking about who would actually use these products and what kind of skincare they would be looking for. Since this was a practice campaign, I wanted my target audience to be realistic instead of choosing everyone.

I selected women aged 18 to 50 as my primary target audience because I considered this age group to be suitable for a skincare-focused campaign. They include college students, working professionals, homemakers, and women who are becoming more aware of skincare and self-care.

While planning the brand, I also thought about the common problems many people face. Many people use skincare products, but not every product is suitable for every skin type. Some people, especially those with sensitive skin, may experience irritation, excess oil, or breakouts after using products that do not suit their skin. This made me think about creating a brand that focuses on simple, naturally inspired skincare.

Another reason I chose natural skincare is that many people are becoming more interested in traditional ingredients. They prefer products that feel gentle, are easy to use, and fit into a simple daily routine. Instead of making unrealistic promises, I wanted Auravé to encourage consistent skincare using ingredients that people already know and trust.

For this practice campaign, I selected Chennai as the target location. The audience interests included skincare, natural beauty, self-care, organic products, and cosmetics. These interests matched the identity of my brand and helped me plan the campaign more realistically.

Overall, this market analysis helped me understand that creating a brand is not only about designing products. It is also about understanding customers, their needs, their concerns, and creating something that connects with them.

Tools & Technologies Used

To complete this project, I used different tools for brainstorming, designing, branding, creating content, and publishing my campaign. Each tool helped me in a different part of the project.

ChatGPT

I mainly used ChatGPT for brainstorming and organising my ideas. Whenever I had an idea for my brand or advertisements, I explained it to ChatGPT and used it to develop my ideas further. I also used it to create product images based on my ideas and to get suggestions for captions, hashtags, and content. After that, I reviewed everything and made my own changes wherever needed.

Canva

After creating the initial images, I used Canva to edit and improve them. I changed the layouts, fonts, colours, icons, and other design elements to match my brand identity. Canva helped me make the posters look more attractive and professional while also adding my own creativity to the designs.

Figma

I used Figma to create product mockups, labels, and packaging designs. It helped me present my products in a more realistic way and maintain a consistent brand identity across all the skincare products.

Google Gemini Flow

I used Google Gemini Flow to create the promotional video for my campaign. I used the tool to generate a short product video, which I later used as my Facebook Reel. This helped me understand how video content can be used in social media marketing.

Facebook Business Page

After completing all the creatives, I created a Facebook Business Page for Auravé. I published the Single Image Ad, Carousel Ad, and Video Ad with suitable captions and hashtags. Although I did not run a live paid advertisement, creating the Business Page helped me understand how businesses present their brands and organise their content on Facebook.

Overall, these tools helped me throughout the project. However, the brand concept, campaign planning, creative decisions, and final presentation were based on my own ideas and understanding.

Campaign Planning

Before creating the advertisements, I first planned how I wanted my campaign to look and who I wanted to reach. Since this was a Facebook Practice Campaign, my main goal was not to run a live advertisement but to understand how a real Facebook campaign is planned and organised from the beginning.

The main objective of my campaign was to create brand awareness for Auravé and introduce it as a natural skincare brand. I wanted to present the products professionally and understand how businesses promote their brands through social media marketing.

For this campaign, I selected women aged 18 to 50 as my target audience because they are more likely to be interested in skincare and self-care products. I also selected Chennai as the target location and focused on people interested in skincare, natural beauty, organic products, self-care, and cosmetics.

While planning the campaign, I decided to use three different advertisement formats because each format has a different purpose. I created a Single Image Ad to introduce the hero product, Green Gram Cleanser, in a simple and attractive way. I then created a Carousel Ad to showcase all five products, allowing people to swipe through each product and learn about them. Finally, I created a Video Ad (Reel) because short videos can help attract viewers' attention and make the content more engaging.

Before creating the advertisements, I also planned the overall brand identity. I chose sage green as the primary brand colour because it represents freshness, nature, and skincare. I also used different colours for each product based on its main ingredient while keeping the overall brand style consistent.

Although this was only a practice campaign, planning each step before designing the advertisements helped me understand how a real marketing campaign is organised. It also showed me the importance of selecting the right audience, choosing suitable advertisement formats, and maintaining a consistent brand identity throughout the campaign.

Bid & Budget Allocation

For this practice campaign, I planned a daily budget of ₹500 for one week, which would be approximately ₹3,500 in total. I chose this budget because Auravé is a new brand, so starting with a small budget for a short period would be suitable for testing the campaign and seeing how the audience responds.

For the bidding strategy, I planned to use Meta's Lowest Cost bidding strategy. I chose this because it helps get the best possible results within the given budget. Since Auravé is a new brand and I did not have any previous campaign data, I did not have enough information to set a specific manual bid.

Since this was only a practice campaign, I did not spend any real money. The budget and bidding strategy were planned only to understand how budget allocation works in a real Facebook advertising campaign.

Campaign Setup

As part of my campaign planning, I also decided the main settings for the Auravé campaign in Meta Ads Manager. These settings were planned according to the target audience and campaign objective I selected earlier.

Campaign Objective: I selected Brand Awareness because Auravé is a new skincare brand, and my main goal was to introduce the brand to people and create awareness.

Audience Targeting: I selected women aged 18–50 in Chennai. I also included interests such as skincare, natural beauty, organic products, self-care, and cosmetics because they are relevant to my target audience.

Ad Placements: I planned to use Automatic Placements, which allows Meta to choose suitable placements across Facebook and Instagram, such as Feed, Stories, and Reels. Since this was a practice campaign, I did not have previous performance data to decide which placement would work better.

Budget & Schedule: I planned a daily budget of ₹500 for one week, which would be approximately ₹3,500 in total. I chose this as a small test budget for the campaign.

Since this was only a practice campaign, no real money was spent. These settings were planned to help me understand how a real Facebook advertising campaign would be configured before running it as a live advertisement.

Optimization Approach

Since this was a practice campaign and not a live advertisement, I did not have any real performance data to work with. However, I thought about how I could improve the campaign if it were running live. I would test different captions and creative versions to see which ones get better engagement from the audience. I would also compare the Single Image, Carousel, and Video Ads to see which format works better for brand awareness and engagement. Based on the results, I would give more budget to the better-performing format. I would also try different audience groups by changing the age range and interests to see which audience responds better to Auravé. This helped me understand that campaign optimization is an ongoing process and should be based on the results and audience response.

Creative Development

After completing the campaign planning, I started developing the creative materials for the Facebook Practice Campaign. My main goal was to create advertisements that looked professional and attractive while maintaining a consistent brand identity across all the designs.

Before designing the advertisements, I finalised the brand colours, logo, product mockups, and packaging designs. I selected sage green as the primary brand colour because it represents freshness, nature, and skincare. For each product, I also used different colours based on its main ingredient while keeping the overall brand identity consistent.

Single Image Advertisement

The first advertisement I created was a Single Image Ad featuring the Green Gram Cleanser, which is the hero product of the Auravé brand. I wanted this advertisement to make a strong first impression and introduce the product in a simple and attractive way.

While designing the poster, I focused on keeping the layout clean without adding too many elements. I highlighted the product image, natural ingredients, and the brand logo so that the advertisement looked professional and easy to understand. After completing the design, I added a suitable caption and relevant hashtags before publishing it on the Facebook Business Page.

Single Image Advertisement

1. Figure 1.3: Single Image Advertisement created for the Green Gram Cleanser to promote the hero product and increase brand awareness

Carousel Advertisement

The second creative was a Carousel Ad. I chose this format because it allows people to swipe through multiple products in a single post.

In this advertisement, I included all five Auravé skincare products:

1. Green Gram Cleanser
2. Rice Water Toner
3. Aloe Vera Gel
4. Rice Flour Face Pack
5. Multani Mitti Face Pack

Each slide was designed using the same brand style so that the entire carousel looked connected. I also mentioned the main benefit of each product to help viewers understand its purpose. After completing the design, I added a professional caption and suitable hashtags before publishing the post.

Video Advertisement

Figure 1.5: Video Advertisement (Facebook Reel) created to promote the Auravé skincare brand and increase brand awareness through engaging visual content.

Facebook Business Page

After completing all the advertisement creatives, I created a Facebook Business Page for my imaginary skincare brand, Auravé. The main purpose of creating this page was to understand how businesses present their brand professionally on Facebook and how they publish marketing content for their audience.

While creating the page, I added the brand name, logo, cover photo, and a short brand description to give it a professional appearance. I wanted the page to look like a real business page instead of just a project submission. This helped me understand the importance of maintaining a consistent brand identity across social media.

Once the page was ready, I published all three advertisement formats that I had created during the project. First, I posted the Single Image Advertisement featuring the Green Gram Cleanser. Then, I uploaded the Carousel Advertisement, which showcased all five skincare products with their individual benefits. Finally, I published the Video Advertisement (Facebook Reel) to make the page more engaging and to understand how video content is presented on Facebook.

For each post, I added suitable captions and relevant hashtags to make the content look more professional and realistic. Although I did not run a live paid advertisement, publishing these posts helped me understand how businesses organise their content and communicate with their audience through Facebook.

Creating the Facebook Business Page gave me practical experience in managing social media content, maintaining brand consistency, and presenting a business professionally online. It also helped me understand the basic workflow of Facebook marketing before launching a real advertising campaign in the future.

Results

By the end of this project, I successfully completed the Facebook Practice Campaign for my imaginary skincare brand, Auravé. I created the brand identity, including the logo, product mockups, and five skincare products. I also created three types of advertisements: Single Image Ad, Carousel Ad, and Video Ad (Facebook Reel).

I also created a Facebook Business Page for Auravé and published the advertisements with suitable captions and hashtags. Since this was a practice campaign and I did not run it as a live paid advertisement, I did not have any real campaign performance results. However, completing this project helped me understand how a Facebook marketing campaign is planned, created, and presented.

Challenges Faced

Since this was my first internship project, I faced a few challenges while working on it. The main challenge was understanding how to prepare a professional project report. In the beginning, I was not sure about the report format, what sections I should include, and how to present my work properly.

Another challenge was creating advertisements that looked professional while keeping the same brand identity in all the designs. I had to make sure that the colours, logo, product images, and overall design matched each other.

I also found it a little difficult to create the brand from the beginning because I had to decide on the brand name, products, colours, target audience, and campaign ideas. I made several changes to my ideas and designs before finalising them.

To overcome these challenges, I referred to the project requirements, worked on my designs multiple times, and attended the doubt-clearing sessions whenever I had questions. These challenges helped me improve my creativity, problem-solving skills, and confidence while completing the project.

Learning Outcomes

This project helped me gain a better understanding of social media marketing and campaign planning. I learned how to create a complete brand identity by choosing the brand name, logo, colours, products, and overall design.

I also learned how different advertisement formats can be used for different purposes. The Single Image Ad can be used to highlight one product, the Carousel Ad can be used to showcase multiple products, and the Video Ad can be used to present a brand in a more engaging way. I also learned how to create a Facebook Business Page, publish posts, write captions, and use suitable hashtags.

Overall, this project improved my skills in branding, creative design, content creation, campaign planning, and Facebook marketing. It also gave me more confidence to work on digital marketing projects in the future.

Conclusion

The Facebook Practice Campaign was a good learning experience for me during my Digital Marketing internship at Unified Mentor. Through this project, I created the Auravé skincare brand and learned how to plan a campaign, create advertisements, and promote a brand on Facebook.

Since this was a practice campaign and I did not run it as a live paid advertisement, I did not get real campaign results. However, the project helped me understand the overall process of creating a social media campaign and gave me practical experience in branding, content creation, and Facebook marketing. Overall, it improved my creativity, marketing knowledge, and confidence, and I believe these skills will help me in my future digital marketing projects.
